

Back To School

by Ronnie Wolfe – 4-2-2012

School, I hate you; that's what I do.
I get up early to go to school.
I sit in class and meditate;
That's the one thing that I hate.

But there's one thing I know much more;
I'll hate being a Sophomore.
In Junior class I'll set my mind
To leave the younger grades behind.

I hate the homework on my bed
And getting info in my head.
I'll hurry through my homework stuff,
Expand my lungs and huff and puff.

I'll work through grades until I'm through,
Doing homework 'til I'm blue.
I'll stay in school no matter what
And end my sentence with a dot.

When I get out, I'll finally see
What it's like to be free.
Then I'll learn the golden rule,
Sign my name, go back to school.
